WHAT'S AHEAD IN AUTO ENGINES

The first automobile manufacturer to produce a variable power fuel and mechanical answer to the present internal combustion gas engine may put his competitors in the shade by the advent of "Gearing Time." The Engineer Magazine.

When types of engines may fill the air, the gas turbine engine, the diesel engine and the fuel injection engine. Only the latter type can claim any relationship to engines with one feature in common, such as fuel injection and fuel pump, can be equipped with it next year. A refinement of the engine to your present car is an excellent idea. The fuel is sprayed directly into the cylinder. This method is fast, efficient, requires no valves and is simple to maintain.

Experimentation with the gas turbine has been extensive and you would expect it to come to the market in the near future. It requires only one type of fuel and weighs a third as much and creates only one spark plug. It gives a high speed and a high torque without a radiator or mechanical cooling system and runs on kerosene. At present the cost of producing the turbine is prohibitive since thousands of parts must be made to suit the turbine. The first gas turbine engine has been successfully operated with kerosene fuel. It is a gas turbine engine and is almost vibration free. And it can be made of conventional materials. It does not work up excessive heat. It is still in the stage of development.

What about other powered engines? The diesel engine is a well known type. It is a gas engine and is almost vibration free. It does not work up excessive heat. It is still in the stage of development.

EDITORIAL

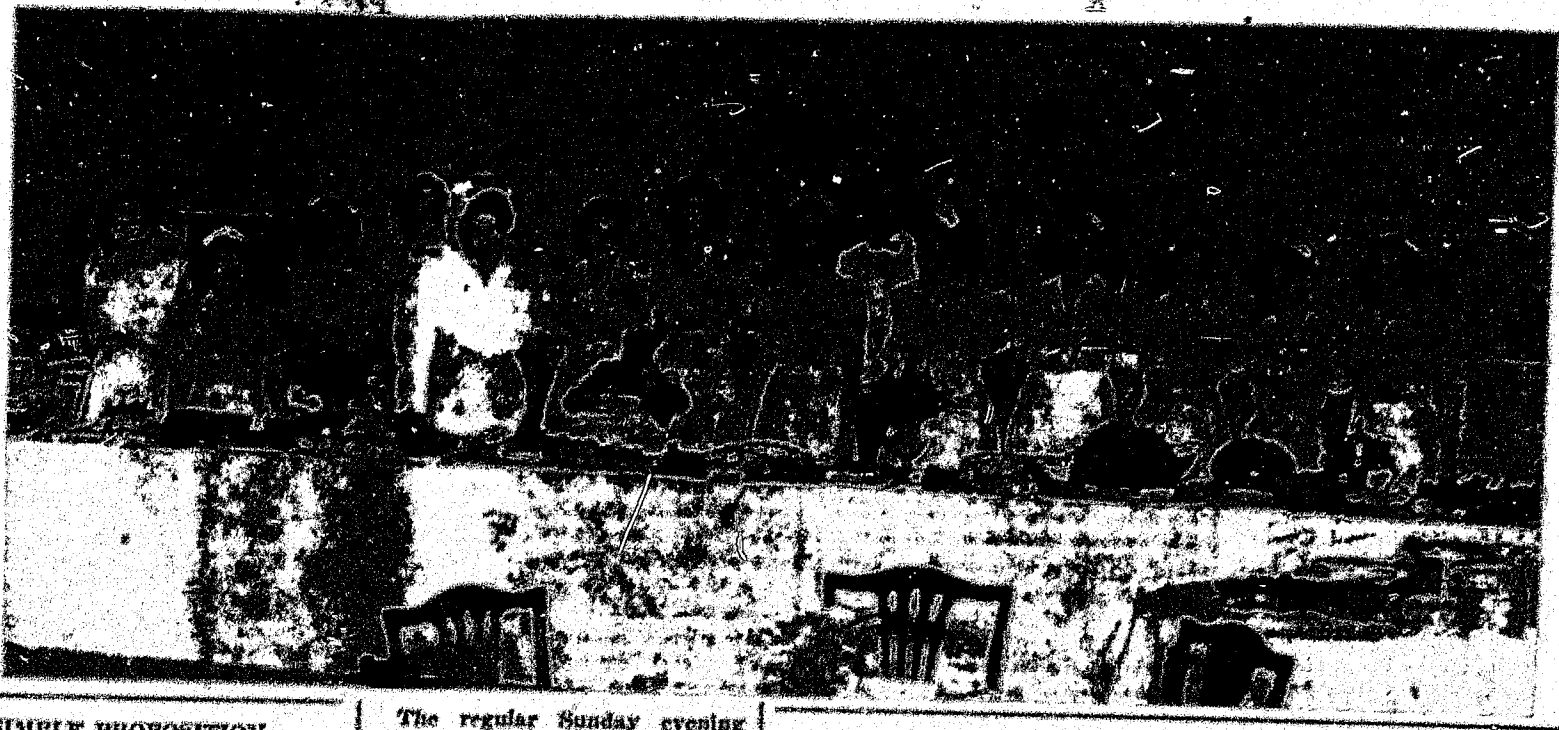

It's Up To You.

It is believed by some that one more fortunate than other places of the important functions of a newspaper is frequent and regular publication of the opinions of its management on topics of interest to its readers. In a weekly paper it is generally assumed that these editorials should cover local problems and serve to present a fair picture of situations as well as offer suggestions for practical solutions or improvement of unsatisfactory conditions.

It has long been our experience that during faults which remained in our local life, and which were the cause of some discussion and criticism, were already recognized by such authorities as could effect a remedy or cure for the situation, and any of our remarks would serve no useful purpose.

One of our more common criticisms has been the village's parking and traffic conditions. While this feature of village life remains less than ideal, reports from other communities of like size seem to indicate that Bethel may be

A SIMPLE PROPOSITION

The bosses of communist Russia used to forecast that the economy of the United States—call it capitalism, call it free enterprise, or call it anything else—was due for a collapse. Then communism, having proven its superiority, would inherit the earth.

Now, according to Edwin A. Lohrey of the Chicago Daily News Service, an abrupt reversal has taken place in the Kremlin. He reports that the present head man, Khrushchev, in a recent private talk with Harold Stassen, admitted that Soviet economists' analyses of the U. S. were wrong.

In making this admission, Mr. Khrushchev simply acknowledged facts. Economic progress in this country—especially as it has affected families of modest means—has been unprecedented in history. Between 1910 and 1932, according to the Industrial Conference Board, the proportion of families in the $3,000-$7,500 bracket increased from 4 per cent to 25 per cent—more than four times. After making adjustment for price changes and taxes, the factory worker with a wife and two children took home 24 times as much pay in 1935 as he did in 1914. The Board also points out that most American families have automobiles, while at the beginning of this year 97 per cent owned radios, 90 per cent electric refrigerators, 89 per cent electric washers, and 72 per cent TV sets. All of these appliances are regarded as luxuries which only the few possess, in other countries—most notably the communist countries.

THAT BUDGET SURPLUS

During the last fiscal year which ended June 30, the federal government had a budget surplus of some $1,780,000,000. This was the first time federal revenues have exceeded expenditures since 1901, and only the fourth time since 1920.

Even so modest a surplus as the recent one is gratifying. It would be a great deal more so had it been the result of a real economy program. It was not.

Actually, spending in the 1935 fiscal year was about $3 billion greater than initial estimates. The surplus came from a combination of two factors—a record business boom coupled with very high tax rates. Even a comparatively mild downturn in business activity could quickly wipe out a surplus and replace it with a deficit.

The moral is that the need for economy in government grows more, not less, acute. We have a surplus's blueprint in the Hoover Commission reports. These constitute the most exhaustive and most authoritative studies of the federal government's financial and spending setup ever made. They are entirely non-partisan. The various Task Forces have been backed with membership drawn from both the major parties. They go into every phase of government operation: paper work, budgetary practices, personnel, procurement, property management, government business enterprises, and so on. To all savings, if all recommendations were followed, would run to many billions a year.

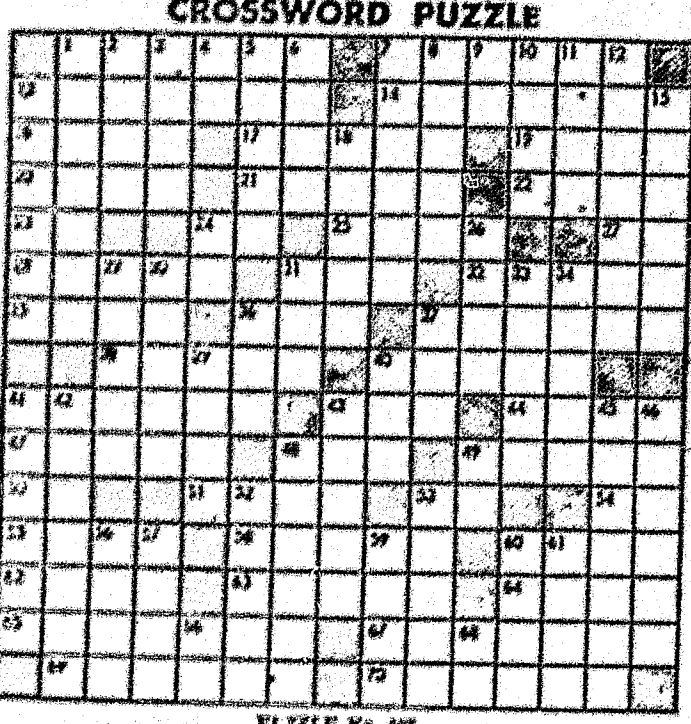

None of the Hoover proposals have been put into effect. Many others including the most important have not. These should have high priority on the agenda when Congress convenes again.

There's Danger About!

We're in a National Traffic Emergency Which Threatens Our Health and Wealth

The average loss was more than $4,000, as shown by a survey of the motor tax of every family in the state.

This year we were getting even more money, time and extra effort into our traffic problem than last year. But instead of getting better the picture is worse.

Nowhere on the highway is there an average of less than 100 accidents a year. At the rate we are going to for 1936, 42,000 Americans will die annually in traffic—the highest total in our history.

Statistics within the next five or six years will likely to give the 50,000 mark in annual traffic deaths.

Attended pressure are mounting steadily as more and more highways are built. The year 1935 has been each year in our country overcrowded streets and highways.

Twenty years ago about 27,000 motor vehicles were registered in the country. This year the figure is more than 60,000, and it's going up daily.

Meanwhile, our highway system has become woefully inadequate. Very little road building went on during World War II and during the early postwar years. Despite the high price of current materials on the local, state and federal levels, it will be many years before our highway system will be considered adequate.

Have we made any progress?

in the war against traffic accidents?

Yes, we have. But it's been mainly on the statistical side.

This so-called progress can be seen in what is called the "traffic death rate" which is based on 100,000 miles of motor vehicle travel. In 1934 the death rate was 1.1. In 1935 it dropped to a low of .84. Last year, it remained at .84.

In terms of actual lives lost, however, we Americans have worked feverishly to stop this slaughter. But have been unable to hold the line. Although the death rate per million miles has been going down, the number of persons killed has been going up for the past 15 years.

Through all the carnage the public has been strangely apathetic. So busy, everyone seems to have a problem and recognizes the threat. But the thing continues.

It's going to continue—and get worse—until you, your friends and your neighbors get alarmed at the threat to you, personally, and get angry enough to demand a solution, to insist on one and to join in efforts to stop this highway carnage.

In the remaining articles in this special emergency series, we will outline some of the things that have handicapped the traffic safety drive and we will present facts that will help you decide how you can do to save your own life and the lives of your loved ones.

REV. ROBERT H. HANSEN
THE TWO WAYS

Jesus tells of the two great ways that lead from time to eternity. The one is broad and smooth, and it seems easy to a man but the end thereof is death. The other is strait and narrow and it is difficult to travel, but it leads to the gate of heaven.

Choosing may prove easy to men and the narrow way may seem hard and difficult. But the destination of each way should lead a man to turn his feet into the narrow way. To put on a man and follow in the footsteps of Jesus is a hard thing. It is said that the way is "strait." This is a different word from "straight." It is a name given a word except long of land between two straight lines. The word also means hard and difficult. But though the strait way of righteousness leads to daily struggle, it ends in a clear conscience and happy thought at the close of day. This way is also an unpopular way, for Jesus says that a few travel it.

Now consider that these are the only ways which lead from time to eternity. There is no middle way leading off between. It is not possible to compromise between evil and good, and there is no possibility of a merger between the two. So let us avoid compromise, and knowing that God demands of each of us that our lives be true and right.

"Use what talent you have. The weeds would be mighty about it so weeds may except those that may not."—Luther Martin.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

Clanton, Ala. News: "If you are the parent of a teen age driver you owe it to yourself to drive out... and look at the highway where they scratch-off on their death-defying trip back to town... be sure to note the long skid marks along the highway where a 'chicken' had to give in for an on-coming car. After all this, when you get back to town you'll say 'my boy couldn't be doing that! Well, we just hope you can keep feeling that way when the bad news comes.'"

Emporia, Kan. Gazette: "Emporia is doing its bit in urging more young people to learn how to swim. There is alarm over physical fitness in the U. S. and swimming is a hot-selling forty ways from Sunday."

Olema, Wash. Record: "The man who lived through the depression had even conditions that were really rough. His greatest lesson is the one that gives him comfort."

"Cocktail?"

(He: "She'll think I'm a sad sack if I say no!")
(She: "I don't want it, but what will be think?")

Do you have to drink, when you're out on a date or a party?

You might think so, to read some advertisements or listen to some radio shows.

Millions of dollars in liquor propaganda are saturating the public with the idea that drinking is socially indispensable.

Smartly dressed men and women, in lavish surroundings, eagerly consume the advertiser's product. Handsome athletes, beautiful girls, even grandmothers try hard to push the public into believing that everyone drinks. Text and commercials imply that alcohol is safe as milk.

But what are the facts?

Actually, liquor is far from the beneficent product that its manufacturers would have you believe. Many people, including those who drink, know that alcohol often causes irreparable harm. It is a depressant, not a stimulant. One out of twenty drinkers becomes an alcoholic.

Why not determine your attitude toward drinking from your viewpoint—not from the viewpoint of those who profit by what you drink? It is a fact that alcohol cannot help you attain health, happiness, or financial security. It is a fact that alcohol can easily cause you to miss out on these. Why be misled by propaganda to the contrary?

For the fact is, again, that drinking is not essential socially, or otherwise. You can get along fine without it. And you need never hesitate to say, "No, thanks, I don't drink." You'll be thought the better of, and feel better, for saying so.

You can get along fine without it!

MORAL INQUIRIES

Some time ago Cameron Hawley, author of the enormously successful novel "Cash McCall," was asked to talk before the Penobscot Valley Association. It was on the subject of "The Tax Laws Make the Difference" and was a very unusual talk. He stated that he is assisted by the fact that the Saturday Evening Post broke a long tradition against using other than original material and reported it.

Mr. Hawley observes, as have many others, that there are grave dangers in the way of our tax system. But he does not believe that the only way to solve the problem is to have a new tax law. He believes that the only way to solve the problem is to have a new tax law.

"JIMMY FUND" BENEFIT AT BETHEL INN AS HOTEL STAFF FEETES GUESTS

The family spirit was much in evidence at the Bethel Inn Friday night last when a capacity attendance of guests was entertained by twelve of the hotel staff. This spirit even included a preliminary atmosphere of conspiracy which was sparked by the bare and hold announcement at breakfast time of "A Great Surprise" to take place that same evening.

The roster of performers included Ethel Hirst, Ann Douglass, Arlene Chase, Arlene Cookidge, Florence Roy, Judy Freeman, Carla Grover, Kenny Emery, George Roy, Vernon Whitman, Eva Merrill, and Ina Cunningham. In introducing them, Owner-Manager Guy P. Butler told the audience crowding the hotel's Music Room that the benefit concert was entirely the idea of the staff.

The high standard of the whole performance was set by Bellman Vernon Whitman's opening piano solo, an original composition entitled "Springtime." He played with feeling and with marked interpretive expression. Another competent piano soloist, who was accompanied for the evening, was Carla Grover, a senior at Gould Academy, who works summers passing the relish and cheese trays in the Inn's dining room. She played throughout with poise and assurance, and she tripled as lightly and as surely over the piano keys as she visits every table once each at breakfast and lunch, and twice at dinner time. She is a composed and attractive young lady.

Instrumental support was provided on the accordion by Arlene Cookidge, a June graduate of Gould Academy. Her initial Rock and Roll number was as smooth as her walking at table, and this and her subsequent tunes were rendered with dexterity and were enthusiastically received.

Another feature of the successful evening was the ensemble singing of the whole group led by Ethel Hirst. They were well rehearsed and had a versatile repertoire which included several popular numbers. They also touched a high spot in their handling of "He Walks With Me" sung in the best tradition of American spirituals and giving opportunity to Mrs. Hirst to show her ability as a practiced choir leader.

Evidence of budding talent of high caliber was furnished by Ann Douglass, another Gould senior. Her voice was in keeping with the theme of her first item "A Many Splendored Thing" of which there was evidence in her competent singing of two coloratura numbers as encores. Here is a coming concert performer who combined talent with charm.

The producer for the show was Mrs. Ina Cunningham who is in charge of the Inn dining room staff, and the whole performance did credit to her leadership. The audience's endorsement was unmistakably shown by the generous applause and it was literally brought to its feet at the conclusion by the singing of the entire group in a selection of familiar old-time favorites.

News of 4-H CLUBS

On Aug. 12 the Nimble Thimble 4-H Club was called to order on the lawn of our leader, Mrs. Gibson. We voted to go on a trip around the White Mountains next Saturday. The members of our Club would like to thank the parents and neighbors who helped to make our first 4-H Sale a success. We are using the money to paint mailboxes and the rest on our trip. The following Tuesday after our sale we had a supper and invited our mothers. All the food was prepared by the girls which was served in the dining room at Mrs. Gibson's. her ability as a practiced choir leader.

Evidence of budding talent of high caliber was furnished by Ann Douglass, another Gould senior. Her voice was in keeping with the theme of her first item "A Many Splendored Thing" of which there was evidence in her competent singing of two coloratura numbers as encores. Here is a coming concert performer who combined talent with charm.

The producer for the show was Mrs. Ina Cunningham who is in charge of the Inn dining room staff, and the whole performance did credit to her leadership. The audience's endorsement was unmistakably shown by the generous applause and it was literally brought to its feet at the conclusion by the singing of the entire group in a selection of familiar old-time favorites.
